

W I N

As Venus' bird, the white swift lovely dove,
Doth on her wings her utmost swiftness prove,
Finding the gripe of falcon fierce not fur.

Sidney.

It hath a papilionaceous flower, out of which erises the pointal, which afterwards becomes a pod, for the most part round and cylindrical, filled with roundish seeds.
Miller.

A set of noddors, winkers, and whisperers, whose business is to strangle all others offspring of wit in their birth.

W I N

the year; therefore a season of the year is a genus: then I serve wherein it differs from these, and that is in the short of the days: therefore this may be called its special nature.